Pegasus 1200 commercial extractor, including the Revolver Hard Surface Tool and a 25-foot hose set. The Revolver is a rotary cleaning tool that cleans tile, grout, and hard surface floors using the extractor's solution pressure and vacuum — giving the Pegasus 1200 dual-surface capability for jobs where both carpet and hard flooring need to be cleaned in the same visit.

High-capacity tanks on the Pegasus 1200 reduce the number of refill stops during a job — a practical advantage in hotel lobby cleaning, convention center work, or large office floor extraction where moving the machine to a water source repeatedly slows production. Larger solution tanks allow operators to clean more area per fill, which matters on jobs with dozens of rooms or thousands of square feet per session. The dual vacuum motor configuration delivers the water lift needed to extract moisture from dense commercial carpet fiber, contributing to faster dry times that allow the area to be reopened sooner. Dry times are a client-facing performance metric for commercial carpet cleaning contractors.

The Revolver is a self-contained rotary head tool that attaches to the extractor's hose. Pressurized solution sprays from rotating jets inside a sealed head while simultaneous vacuum lifts the solution and soil off the floor surface — a process called hot water extraction (HWE) on hard floors. This cleans grout lines and porous tile surfaces more effectively than mopping, which redistributes soils without extracting them. For carpet cleaning contractors who also handle tile and grout restoration, the Revolver extends the service offering without requiring a separate machine. The 25-foot hose set gives the operator enough reach to work across a room without repositioning the Pegasus 12
